Antique sampler: Josephine Pichat 1876

REPRODUCTION SAMPLER CHARTED BY MURIEL BERCEVILLE - COUNTED CROSS STITCH

The original piece is an antique sampler that was stitched in 1876 by Joséphine Pichat. It is of French origin, from a small town close to the Alps.

The original piece (shown below right) is quite sophisticated in its use of threads. It was stitched on linen fabric using a silk thread. The birds were stitched with a Silk Chenille thread that added a dimensional effect to the stitched piece. The pretty lace-like border alternates parts stitched in one and two strands.

While taking into account the color of the background fabric, the reproduction chart's color palette remains very similar to the original colors. A few adjustments were made to the composition to allow for symmetry and more regular spacing but the overall "spirit" is very close to the original.

A reproduction of an antique alphabet, charted by Muriel Berceville.
